

Protect yourself from Box Cutter injuries

Box cutters are an efficient way to slice through bulky materials. But they can also be a source of injury, if not used correctly. It is important that you have training on how to use and sharpen box cutters.

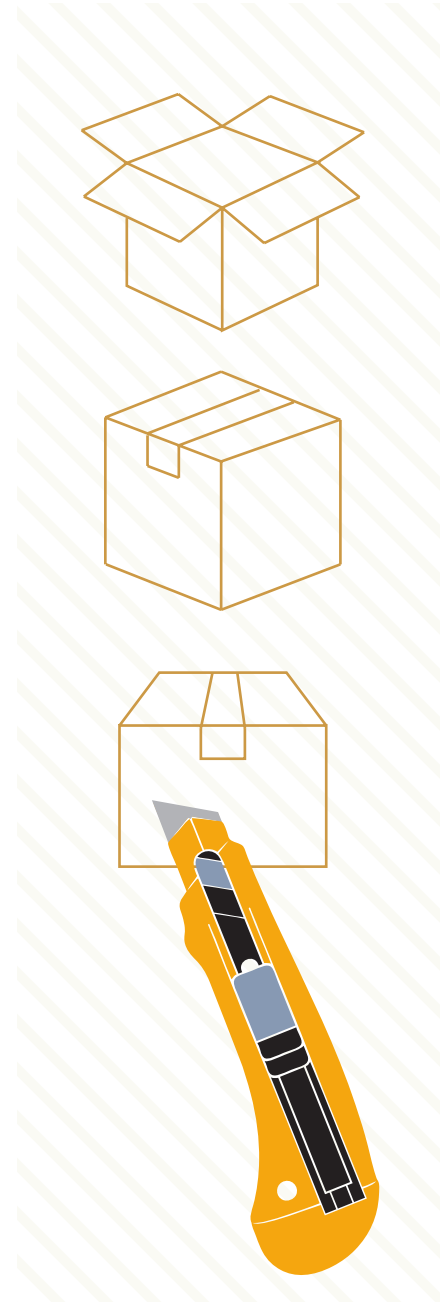

Best Practices:

- ✓ Keep the blades as sharp and as short as possible
- ✓ Replace dull or broken blades
- ✓ Wear metal mesh gloves and other protective gear
- ✓ When using a box cutter, angle it away from the body
- ✓ Watch the blade at all times

When finished using a box cutter, you should:

- ✓ Retract the blade
- ✓ Cover the box cutter and store it in a secure place
- ✓ Use puncture-resistant containers for the disposal of dull or damaged blades
